

A pleasant morning to you all. First of all, I would like to thank and appreciate everyone who is here with us to celebrate the accomplishments of the Class of 2020. On behalf of the senior class, I would like to acknowledge those who render the University of Kyrenia excellent, the board members, administration, the faculties, the departments, our lecturers and all the staff members who facilitate the day to day activities both academic and non-academic. Let me also extend my to gratitude to the parents and guardians, family and friends, for the undying support and wisdom you have provided throughout the course of our studies without you we wouldn't have made it this far. Your efforts and or endeavors cannot be overlooked.

I'm eternally grateful for this opportunity to represent the Class of 2020. It's been quite a ride in which we had to work hard and force ourselves to attend classes and endure the sometimes unpredictable weather in Cyprus and missing the bus. I can attest to the beauty of it that despite ups and downs it will pay off

This event brings into the world different meanings to each and every one of us. To some it comes as a welcome relief, to others, it is accompanied by a feeling of nostalgia as we look back on good times and friends we've made, to others, it's a shock. To my fellow graduates after this, probably the highlight of your conversations next to "congratulations!" will be the question "what's next?", and in as much we have to think about our future I urge you to take time and enjoy this moment for a while, it is your pride and joy let it savor. To those remaining continue working hard!

I liked what this other guy said yesterday about having and creating connections or networks in general, to quote him he said "Your network is your net worth" so what I took from this is that these relationships and friendships you get during your studies should not be taken for granted because you can realize your opportunity in them.

Thank you!
